London, UK – August 7, 2025 – STACK Infrastructure (“STACK”), the digital infrastructure partner to the world’s most innovative companies and a leading global developer and operator of data centers, today announced a leadership transition wherein Brian Cox has been appointed interim CEO of STACK EMEA, in addition to his role as CEO of STACK Americas, effective immediately. He will also join the STACK EMEA Board. John Eland is transitioning out of the company.

“Brian is a proven leader, with an innate understanding of our long-term strategy and track record of delivering growth,” said Phil Koen, Chairman of the Board of STACK. “We have the utmost confidence in his ability to drive our strategy and operations in the region.”

STACK EMEA is a dedicated pan-European hyperscale data center platform with 15 live data centers and multiple active construction projects across 7 European markets. STACK recently completed the sale of its European colocation business, solidifying its focus on hyperscale clients in the region.

“I look forward to partnering with the EMEA team to execute our strategy, as we continue to strengthen STACK’s position as a trusted global digital infrastructure partner with significant resources, capacity and development expertise,” said Cox. “I’m confident that STACK’s momentum will only continue to build across EMEA as we pursue our strategy of hyperscale development in the region.”

Moving forward, Cox will be splitting his time between STACK’s offices in Denver and London. With over 25 years of industry and operational experience, Cox was appointed CEO of STACK Americas in 2018. Prior to STACK, he was Chief Operating Officer of Cologix, a global data center and interconnection solutions provider. At Cologix, he was responsible for critical infrastructure, development, and commercial management, growing the business from a startup with one data center into an international platform with 25 data centers across the U.S. and Canada.
